The Mission

of the Foundation

Support innovative and educational projects in the fields of food and nutrition.

It supports projects in connection with three principles that guide the steps of the Foundation every day: believing in progress, changing behaviors and sharing knowledge.

Believing in Progress

The Roquette Foundation supports medical research to prevent, cure and avoid the spread of diseases, thus promoting the good health of women and men around the world.

Changing Behaviors

The Roquette Foundation supports project owners who inform populations of societal challenges involving nutrition and thus motivate them to change their eating habits.

Sharing Knowledge

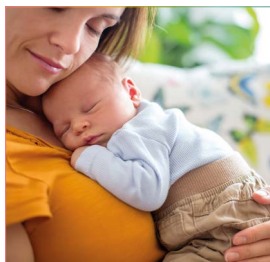

The Roquette Foundation supports project owners who share their knowledge and disseminate their know-how to improve the eating habits, well-being and health of as many people as possible.

The PENSINE Project

led by INFINITE
(Institute for Translational Research in Inflammation)

The PENSINE project, led by Professor Emmanuel Hermann and his team, aims to identify the role played by breastfeeding and nutrition on the intestinal health of children from conception to four years of age. The study follows more than 350 mother-child volunteer couples in the Hauts-de-France region and assesses the maturity of children's intestines.

The Bettering Lives of Children Project

from the Thien An Home II non-profit organization

In Vietnam, the Thien An Home II non-profit organization has worked for 20 years for well-being and integration of families and children from rural ethnic minorities. To provide for the daily needs of the families, Thien An Home II trains them in agricultural and breeding techniques, gardening and cooking.

The Education and Nutrition Program

from the Magic Bus non-profit organization

For more than 20 years in India, the Magic Bus non-profit organization provides young people aged 12 to 18 from poor backgrounds with essential skills and develops their employability. Through the Education and Nutrition program, supported by the Roquette Foundation, Magic Bus promotes and raises the awareness of these young people to the importance of good health and the nutritional challenges linked to it.
